MONDAY, MAY 4, 1767.

Meſſieurs EDES & GILL,

I HAVE read the account of the flouriſhing ſtate of the churches under the paſtoral care of the Rev. Mr. Winſlow, in Braintree, Stoughton and Dedham, on which I have no obſervations to make, having no reaſon, conſidering the character of the gentleman, to think that it is contrary to truth. If any perſons acquainted with the ſtate of affairs in thoſe towns can gainſay it, it is with them to make objections. But that accounts not quite conſiſtent with the ſimplicity of the goſpel have been formerly tranſmitted to the Society for propagating that goſpel, I myſelf well know.—I had the pleaſure of ſome acquaintance with Mr. Winſlow when he was a miſſionary in Connecticut, and eſteemed him one not only faithful in his office, but of a blameleſs character in all reſpects. If he now too much ſymbolizes with ſome of his brethren in ſending home exaggerated accounts of his ſucceſs, I ſhould be very ſorry—But as I live at a conſiderable diſtance from thoſe towns I pretend not to be able to determine the matter.

But what ſtrikes my mind with aſtoniſhment is the ſhort extract from the Biſhop of Glouſter's diſcourſe before the ſociety.* This is truly amazing, and how he can anſwer for ſuch a "railing accuſation," bro't againſt the body of the people in the colonies, deſerves his ſerious conſideration.—There is a ſenſe however, tho' far diſtant from his Lordſhip's intention, in which it may be ſaid to be true. The coloniſts are not more ready to laugh at the Ruffs and Collar bands of their progenitors, than at the Bible they ſo much eſteemed. The truth is, they laugh at neither. They ridicule nothing which their good forefathers were fond of. Tho' ſome of us differ in opinion from them, yet it cannot be denied that in general we pay ſomewhat of a ſuperſtitious regard to the principles & practices of thoſe worthy men. Deiſm is ſcarcely named among us. I queſtion whether there is a profeſſed deiſt in the colony of the Maſſachuſetts, in which I am an Inhabitant. To the ſhame of chriſtians it muſt be confeſſed that great inattention and indifference to religion almoſt every where prevails; tho' leſs perhaps in the colonies than in any other part of chriſtendom.—But as for ſpeculative deiſts I hope few or none are to be found without going from this continent to ſeek for them. And let that haughty prelate know that the great name of Warburton will not ſanctify a falſehood——I ſay a falſehood, for by no ſofter term can it be called. It may be that by this he intended to prove the expediency of ſending more miſſionaries, to recover us from gentiliſm, a word which I am told he uſes in his ſermon. I have not read it myſelf, but am credibly informed that he ſpeaks of the colonies as in a ſtate of gentiliſm, and ſays many hard things, beſides what is contained in the extract publiſhed in your paper. It is true that the ſubſcribers to the pious work of propagating the goſpel reaſonably expect to ſee ſomething both in the annual Sermon and the Abſtract, to encourage them to continue their ſubſcriptions: But will it do to ſpeak thus wickedly for God? Let his Lordſhips conſcience anſwer

How much nearer the truth was good Mr. De Berdt, agent for our houſe of repreſentatives, in a letter to the houſe laſt year, in which he expreſſes his honeſt joy at the agreable proſpect that appeared at home reſpecting the American affairs! "This" (ſays he, or words to the ſame effect,) "gives me the greateſt pleaſure, as I have reaſon to think there are among you MANY of the Lord's faithful ſervants". It were indeed to be wiſhed that the number was much greater—But that there are among us but very few, if any ſpeculative deiſts, and many ſerious, devout chriſtians, is as true as the Biſhop's aſſertion is falſe. We greatly venerate the memory of our pious anceſtors, thoſe faithful ſervants of the Lord, and thoſe zealous friends to civil and religious liberty—that equal law of liberty, as his Lordſhip calls it, in his dedication of the divine legation to the free-thinkers—a ſet of men however numerous in Britain, that (as I ſaid before,) are rarely if at all to be found among us.

To our poſſeſſing in a conſiderable degree the ſpirit of our fore-fathers, was owing that ſteady, manly oppoſition that was made to the ſtamp-act; tho' the Coloniſts are, at all their fathers were, as loyal as any people in the King's dominions.

Had we been free-thinkers and deiſts (however ſuch may boaſt of their love of liberty,) we ſhould, 'tis probable, have ſubmitted to it. I hold it for a truth, laugh who will, that in that community where there is the moſt ſerious godlineſs, and vital chriſtianity (phraſes which New-England-men are not aſhamed to uſe,) there is the moſt ardent love of liberty. "Where the ſpirit of the Lord is, there is liberty"—are the words of inſpiration—which are applicable not only to that freedom of ſoul in the ſervice of God which every good man feels in himſelf; but alſo, in a more remote ſenſe, to that love to civil and religious liberty which every true patriot feels when he is exerting himſelf for the preſervation of the rights of the community he lives in; and to that philanthropy and benevolence which prompts a friend to human nature to promote, as far as he is able, the common rights of mankind in general. 'Twas this ſpirit that animated our worthy fore-fathers to come into this land, when a waſte & howling wilderneſs.—'Twas this ſpirit that made them ſo tenacious of their Rights as Men, as Engliſhmen. 'Twas the ſame ſpirit, which their children now inherit, that gave the Americans the zeal and courage to reſiſt what they apprehended a moſt grievous infringement of their civil rights, and what would have paved the way for the deſtruction of their religious rights, no leſs than their civil. And they would doubtleſs have reſiſted even to blood, had not God in his providence diſpoſed the friends and patrons of America to exert themſelves for their relief, which they effectually obtained. 'Twas this ſpirit that inſpired the houſe of repreſentatives of this province in the year 1765, to paſs the reſolutions relative to our rights, which will never be reſcined, but remain on record to their everlaſting honor. 'Twas the ſame ſpirit that actuated the laſt patriotic houſe in the ſalutary meaſures they took to perfect the good work ſo happily begun the preceeding year. And let Tories, or (in the language of the New-England pſalms,) church of malignants grin, or ſneer, or ſcold, I will add my ſincere wiſh, that the ſame ſpirit may poſſeſs the people in our ſeveral towns in the approaching elections of repreſentatives; which if it ſhould, 5 out of 6 at leaſt of the late members will be re-elected; for better cannot be found. It would be invidious to point out the men by name that are unworthy of your ſuffrages. Let this ſhort maxim be the criterion by which to judge—He that cenſures the general conduct of the laſt houſe, with reſpect to matters of a public nature, is not fit to have a ſeat in the next houſe. I ſay general conduct, for ſome particular things may poſſibly appear exceptionable to men of a patriotic diſpoſition; which diſtinction I hope will be attended to, "leſt while we are endeavouring to root up the tares, we root up alſo the wheat with them"——But I find my zeal has occaſion'd me to wander from the ſubject I ſet out upon. I ſhall therefore add no more, than to aſk the reader to excuſe this heterogeneous, tho' well meant performance, and ſo bid him adieu.

April 27, 1767. A. W.

Meſſieurs EDES and GILL,

Pleaſe to give the following a Place in your next.

ABOUT this time annually, or ſooner, ſomewhat, has been committed to your faithful and impartial preſs (by which the public are, and have been much oblig'd, benefited and edify'd) relative to the choice of Repreſentatives through the province.—And to a modeſt man, what formerly was ſaid on that head might ſeem quite ſufficient—Nor ſhould I now have ſaid a word, had it not been I plainly perceived that the Philiſtines were upon thee Sampſon,—I mean the many under-hand, under-ground letters lately wrote, purely on account of one man, and to ſatisfy his boundleſs ambitious mind.—How induſtriouſly has the ſtale old doctrine been propagated?—not two pence better, better did I ſay? nay infinitely worſe, if poſſible, than that of non-reſiſtance and paſſive obedience—I mean that of worſhipping graven images—expreſly forbidden by a certain commandment coming from higher and greater authority, than that which is for the time being—and which I dare not break or diſobey; and I thank God I can't find in my heart any thing prompting me thereto.——However, my dear brethren, at this time of day I truſt we do not behold men (or things) as meerly thro' a glaſs darkly, but face to face, as one man ſeeth another,—for ſure I am we have had recent inſtances of glaring conduct!——and which if deſired, I may in future explain.——I am no party-man—but a well-wiſher to my King and country, and would ſeduouſly avoid or rather deſpiſe that man, who ſhould attempt only to fawn & flatter the one, or injure the other, be his maſk of modeſty ever ſo large.——I could ſay many things—I mean not to iritate—but if I could, provoke to love and emulation.—But I cannot help ſaying, I ſtand aſtoniſh'd and amaz'd to ſee any of this people ſo blind to their own intereſt.—Have not your tools and ſycophants (not to ſay any thing worſe) merely by low art and management, heretofore been in ſome towns elected Repreſentatives, while worthy, honeſt and truly qualified men have ſtood by neglected?—and all to ſatisfy the ſame man.—In a word, may our decent firmneſs, ſtability, & manly reſolution, touching our moſt unqueſtionable rights and privileges, be as conſpicuous as our unſhaken and remarkable loyalty and dutifulneſs to the beſt of Sovereigns—I ſay it, and I glory in it) I ſay it, and I will repeat it, as conſpicuous as our unſhaken and remarkable loyalty and dutifulneſs to the beſt of Sovereigns—then will even Majeſty itſelf (if not miſinformed) look down upon us with a royal paternal ſmile.---Touching the approaching Election, (the cob-web eſſays which have been made behind the door notwithſtanding) rouſe my dear countrymen, and with one heart and one voice, let us CHUSE for the enſuing year, the honeſt, the prudent, the knowing, the wiſe and the juſt; ever ſet theſe men upon your high watch-tower.---Theſe men ſhall deſcry danger from afar, and wicked deſigns at a diſtance---theſe men ſhall ſcatter iniquity with their eyes-----and theſe men ſhall, under God, preſerve us from the baſe intrigues of the raſcally time-ſerver, and the moſt paltroon ſeeker.

Messieurs EDES and GILL,

Please to inſert the following.

THE reſtleſs and infatuated enemies of Great-Britain and her Colonies have been inceſſantly endeavouring to make the Miniſtry, the Parliament, and the whole People of England believe that we are ungrateful, factious, diſloyal: This is not a bare ſurmize, but is warranted by letters from gentlemen of the beſt character on tother ſide the water. At the ſame time they are taking pains to abate our eſteem and affection for our brethren in England, by repreſenting them to us, as unkindly diſpos'd towards us. Thus they have play'd a double game; and by ſtriving to fix a mutual jealouſy between us, have done all in their power to deſtroy that mutual harmony, which every man of every order ought, and every friend to both countries will cultivate. Surely theſe men have much to anſwer for: What worſe treaſon can there be, next to an attempt upon the life or crown of the King, than to aim at poſſeſſing the minds of his Majeſty's miniſters, and thro' them of his Majeſty himſelf, with "unfavorable ſentiments" of his moſt loyal and loving ſubjects! What greater crime againſt the ſtate, than to be perpetually uſing baſe arts and calumny, to lay a foundation of diſcord, ſo big with evil to the mother country & her colonies! That the people of this province, and we may venture to ſay, of all our ſiſter colonies, are diſpos'd to yield the moſt chearful obedience to every conſtitutional act of Great-Britain, has been notorious for many years paſt—We defy the Tories on this and that ſide the Atlantick to prove the contrary.—It is as notorious that an unconſtitutional act, or in other words an act of "mere power" ſits as awkardly upon them as upon their fellow ſubjects in Britain—If liberty is invaded either here or there, we hope there will be always ſpirit eno' at leaſt to complain of it—If our charter rights are infring'd, we cannot be "tame ſpectators" of it any more than our brethren wou'd be of a breach of Magna Charta. We muſt and will keep our attention to the conſtitution, as long as it is worth attending to, and every honeſt and ſenſible man in England will juſtify & applaud us—Knaves and fools are not worth regarding—Be it known then that all honeſt and ſenſible ſubjects in Britain and America are united—they agree as one man to ſupport the crown and dignity of his moſt ſacred Majeſty, and the authority and rights of parliament and of general aſſembly, upon the well known and eſtabliſh'd principles of the Britiſh conſtitution—they agree to cultivate harmony between all his Majeſty's ſubjects in every part of the globe upon the footing of liberty and true friendſhip—This crown and dignity, this authority, theſe rights, this liberty and friendſhip, they will maintain at the expence of every thing dear and valuable, even their blood—This is the truly noble ſpirit that now prevails, and whoever ſhall go about, either by open attempts or ſecret machinations to deſtroy, or even in the leaſt degree to check ſuch a ſpirit, let him be accurſed, and all the people ſhall ſay Amen. POPULUS.

NEW-YORK, April 23.

Extract of a Letter from London, (by the Packet) dated February 14.

"The miſchiefs ariſing from the frequent changes in the miniſtry, are too obvious to require a recital of them —— It has for ſome time paſt been generally hoped and believed, that the preſent adminiſtration would be more perminent than the former; but now we have reaſon to fear immediate and great changes. The reaſons which are hinted, as likely to occaſion them, are, That Lord Ch——m's frequent and long indiſpoſitions, render him often incapable of buſineſs; and his great influence when he recovers his health, enables him to overthrow any meaſures entered into while he is ill, which occaſions great delay in parliamentary affairs.—— This, it is ſaid, will render his removal neceſſary; and ſhould that happen, very conſiderable alterations will enſue. Some imagine the D of B——d's and Mr. Gr——le's parties will be re-admitted.

To PHILANTHROP.

SIR,

I Can take no pleaſure in exulting over a diſappointed antagoniſt; yet you muſt allow me to remind you of your promiſe, to attempt a vindication of the G——r's ſpeeches laſt May (as you declared yourſelf to be a perſon of veracity). The Public have long expected your appearance, but have hitherto been diſappointed.—I muſt, Sir, inſiſt on your fulfilling your engagement, and no time can be ſo proper as the preſent.—If you think that the houſe who were charged with Rebellion, and vilified as Traitors, deſerved ſuch treatment, you may (as they are now diſſolv'd) freely declare your ſentiments of them without fear of puniſhment.—Moreover, as the anniverſary of ſpeech-making is approaching, unleſs you get thro' ſome of your buſineſs immediately, it is probable that the next diſplay of your patron's eloquence will ſo increaſe the difficulty of juſtifying him, that you will be oblig'd for ever to relinquiſh your generous undertaking.—You alſo hinted in ſome of your papers, that you tho't it poſſible to explain the paragraphs in his E——y's letter, quoted by the proteſting Lords, in ſuch a manner as to take off every imputation of malicious miſrepreſentation from Verres. A copy of that whole letter is now arriv'd, and by comparing that ſentence with the other parts of the letter, it is very eaſy to determine whether the Lords did, or did not miſunderſtand his E——y. And therefore, now is the moſt ſuitable time to ſet this matter right likewiſe. But tho' I ſo ſtrongly deſire to ſee you ſtep forth as the defender of much injured innocence, yet let gratitude to the Public, who have ſo patiently borne ſo much impertinence from you, deter you from making any further parade, until you are prepared to enter upon the grand point in debate---I mean, Philanthrop, the G——r's ſpeeches delivered here, and his letters ſent home.

I am, as far as Decency will permit,
Your's, PASKALOS.

INTELLIGENCE EXTRAORDINARY.

WE can aſſure the Public, that a Pamphlet is now in Town, printed in London, which contains many Letters wrote by the Favourers of the late Stamp Act in America—Theſe Letters we ſhall favor the Public with as ſoon as we can obtain them; but are ſorry to ſay they cannot give any Pleaſure to a real Friend to this Country, as they contain more Falſhood, Malice and Ill-will towards America than even a B——d was ever ſuſpected of.

Some Men of Power among us have affected to cenſure the Conduct of New-York, in not making that Proviſion for the King's Troops which was ſpecified in the Mutiny Bill—when it is notorious thoſe very Gentlemen upon the firſt Sight of ſaid Act expreſſed their utmoſt Diſlike of it----and gave it out publickly as their Opinion, that it was full as unconſtitutional and dangerous an Attempt upon our Rights, as was the Stamp-Act. Even Mr. S—— O——r declared his Surprize, that our Patriots were ſo backward to take the Alarm.

G——r B——d is at his old Trade of rubbing up old Tools, and making new ones, againſt the enſuing Election---Commiſſions are ſhamefully proſtituted to obtain an Aſſembly that ſhall be ſubſervient to his Deſigns,

A moſt extraordinary Stretch of Prerogative has been made with Reſpect to the famous Philanthrop, the Poſt of Attorney-General has been ſplit to reward ſpecial Services; and he now ſtands ſecond Attorney-General for ſpecial Occaſions; and the Head of the Law is not allowed to appoint his own Deputy.

We are ſurprized to hear that his Excellency has withheld his Conſent to the Grant made by the late Houſe to their worthy and ſucceſsful Agent, Dennys DeBerdt, Eſq; notwithſtanding it had been unanimouſly concurred by the Council.

In former Proclamations for a Faſt, we were called upon to ſupplicate Heaven, "that our invaluable Privileges, civil and religious, might be graciouſly continued to us."---We do not find ſuch a Clauſe in thoſe of later Years. However, our Clergy have univerſally continued to make it a Matter of their Petitions on thoſe Days.

SUPPLEMENT to the Boston-Gazette, &c. of

MONDAY, MAY 4, 1767.

Meſſieurs EDES & GILL,

Pleaſe to inſert the following. ||

HAPPY Continent, thrice happy Maſſachuſetts, & even beyond a ſuperlative HAPPY BOSTON, whoſe lot it is to be bleſt with ſo learned, ſo ſagacious and diſintereſted a PHYSICIAN, embelliſhed as much with the Belles Lettres, as imbued with the art of APOLLO.

Sad was my misfortune to reſent the honeſt condemnation of ſo knowing a maſter of art! I little tho't what a torrent of Billingſgate awaited my devoted head! and were it not that gratitude demands my acknowledgment in more reſpects than one, I ſhould ſcarce have troubled the Public any further with myſelf or my cauſe; but as deficiency in this article is the worſt of crimes, ſuffer me to return my moſt unfeigned thanks to the eminent Dr. M. Whitworth, for that

He has told the world honeſtly, "that the patient's firſt complaint was a vomiting of blood, which ſoon went off, but left a conſtant cough attended with pain at the ſtomach, and difficult reſpiration." Farther (as a fair ſtate of the matter is here intended) we are informed, that "a few days before he ſaw her, ſhe began to expectorate very freely a purulent matter ſlightly tinged with blood:"— "ſhe was at this time vaſtly emaciated and weak, had a low quick pulſe, & great depreſſion of ſpirits." This magazine of the deſcriptive part of medicine preſents itſelf to us in a three-fold view. Firſt, we ſee the woman "a year ago vomiting blood; ever ſince a conſtant cough attended with pain at the ſtomach, and a difficult reſpiration." Here I think no gentleman of the faculty will accuſe the Doctor of plagiary, or fitting a deſcription to any intention: for the vomiting blood left a cough, which would induce a common reader to ſuppoſe the very firſt flux of blood was from the lungs, and not from the ſtomach, which bowel is alone ſubject to the action of vomiting: what nature meant by joining pain in the ſtomach, with a difficult reſpiration, it might be reckoned a ſtill higher aggravation of my already infinite preſumption, ſhould I attempt to penetrate.

Next, a few days before the Doctor came, "ſhe began to expectorate very freely a purulent matter ſlightly tinged with blood": this may indeed be true, and very probably is ſo.

Laſtly, "ſhe was at this time (we conceive the time the Doctor ſaw her) vaſtly emaciated & weak, had a low quick pulſe, & great depreſſion of ſpirits." This is all I think that the Autopſy of ille Magnus Latonius has deign'd to favour us with; and from this, the whole faculty of Phyſick is called upon to determine "the juſtice of the cenſure upon the Mountebank."—I dare ſay but little for myſelf againſt ſo powerful an antagoniſt, but would beg leave juſt to enquire of any gentleman, whoſe views are only the diſabuſe and information of the Public, Whether a patient taken with an Hæmoptyſis or raiſing blood from the lungs, might not have a tumor raiſed, ſuppurated, and evacuated, and yet after all, ſucceeded by a ſecond, third and fourth, or ſtill further—And if ſo, whether it might not be as proper to endeavor the reſolution of the laſt tumor by bleeding, as the firſt—or whether, from what the Doctor has ſaid, it appears impoſſible that any inflamation or orgaſm of the blood ſhould ariſe, that might warrant bleeding?

I have once aſſured the Public, and neither have had nor can expect contradiction, that the patient had inflamation, anxiety, &c. before the bleeding—that notwithſtanding the bleeding, ſhe had a farther Hæmoptoe next day; and what more need be ſaid on that head to ſatisfy any perſon of common ſenſe in the univerſe? Hence again, I thank the Doctor for his more accurate aſcertainment of the quantity of blood taken, as I rather fear cenſure for taking too little than too much.—And thirdly, I thank the Doctor for the publick delivery of his honeſt and ſenſible prognoſtic on the 6th of Feb. which he found verified on the 13th of next month. And fourthly, I thank the Doctor for his new theory of relaxation, as the bulk of authors ſuppoſe emptying the veſſels gives them liberty to contract. Fifthly, I thank the Doctor for his friendly ſuggeſtion of the plea of ignorance. I am ſenſible of its uſe to many of the moſt vaporing cenſurers, as well as vile criminals, among whom I find myſelf ſo diſpotically claſſed.—Sixthly, I thank the Doctor for his complaiſance to the celebrated Authors bro't to vindicate my practice; and that he has acknowleged me the capacity to read them, as his negation of either might have overturned the whole.—Seventhly, I almoſt adore the Doctor for his tenderneſs of the blood of his countrymen, and promiſe for the future never to take a drop from man, woman or child, in the town or province, unleſs I think it will do them more harm to keep than part with it.—I agree with the Doctor, that none of thoſe gentlemen ever intended to encourage quackery, nor indeed need they, for Quacks ſeldom trouble their heads about them, as is evident from the figure they make, when they attempt to meddle with them.—Doctor Morgan forbids bleeding "in all deeply fixed radicated diſeaſes." Huxham, "when once the phlegmon is too far advanced to be reſolved, bleeding is really diſadvantageous." Something equally ſhrewd are the two conſiſtent obſervations.—"publiſhed his hiſtory of the caſe not with any regard to facts, but in order to exculpate himſelf." And then the ſubſequent "inconſiſtency of that relation," A man who could read, might (one would think) tranſcribe a caſe from ſome Author in the neighbourhood, that would ſquare pretty well.—But to paſs on, He ſays "ſhe took no medicine after ſhe was let blood." This I ſhould gueſs a fault of the preſs, had I not both the papers before me: But enough on Blunders.

"I believe no pretender to medicine in this country ever did in ſo ſhort a time ſend ſo many people prematurely to their graves". This at leaſt ſhews the fellow has been employed. "It is much to be regretted that a man who has nothing to recommend him but his unparallelled impudence, ſhould receive the leaſt countenance in this place, where there are perſons of approved abilities." I agree again, that nothing is more worthy of regret, than the many ſcandalous impoſitions people have ſuffered from pretenders to phyſic; and to ſhew how fond I am to have ſuch impoſters detected, I hereby invite Dr. Whitworth to appoint in the public prints, time and convenient place, to ſtate and anſwer (if being) queſtions in all the arts, ſciences and languages preparatory to a juſt and rational knowledge of medicine, the ſcience of medicine itſelf, or any other ſcience that becomes the gentleman, the ſcholar, or the phyſician; in which I ſhall, if life and health permit, attend him: and then the public will have the ſatisfaction to ſee at leaſt one blockhead expoſed to the contempt we both agree ſuch deſerve.

I have only once more to thank the Doctor for the unparallelled complaiſance with which he condeſcends to treat my friends, "who with gaping mouths attend to my dreams." I know not that I exhibited on the ſubject of viſions in other company than that of the faculty, neither of whom I preſume would think it an overgrown compliment to be eſteemed equal in ſenſe or learning to Dr. Whitworth.

Some of the Doctor's logic I confeſs I do not fully underſtand, "I was offended at the impudence of the fellow who had thus ſtole in without ever conſulting me." For my part, I always have thought that people had a right to ſend for whom they pleaſed, and chuſe whether the latter muſt conſult the former or no, without either theft or robbery in the caſe: But if patients be the ſole property of their phyſicians, I rejoice in finding myſelf ſo much richer than I expected; for we are now on a footing with the watchmaker or gunſmith, who can keep the work till they have their pay.

But I much ſuſpect this land of liberty will with abhorrence reject our claim.

The Doctor's ſuperb concluſion "to take no more notice of the ſtroller in this way," obliges me to caution him againſt any other way which may further ſubject him to the laſh of the laws of his country; to which his delicate performance has already too much expoſed him.

Adieu, 'till next occaſion,

THO. YOUNG.

P. S. Tho' the above is more than ſufficient for the learned, I have for the ſake of the deceaſed's friends, made this extract from my diary. Feb. 13. ordered Hoffman's ſweet ſpirit of nitre, and a linctus of honey, parmaſitty and a little balſam capivi, with honey'd barley water, cranberry ſauce, &c. 20th continued with little variation. 24th. at evening bled, and order'd ſyrup of poppies. Suppoſe I ſaw her on the 26th, but as I tho't her circumſtances low, did not charge the viſit; neither did I the 28th, when I finally left her.—So that Dr. Whitworth found no material alteration till the 27th, tho' ſhe had taken my medicines from the 13th. If ſhe and her nurſe deceived both him and me, it is not my fault—or if (which I much ſuſpect) his viſits were ſomething rare, and his bed-ſide practice moderately related to his public exhibitions, it is nothing ſurprizing he found no remarkable alteration. I believe his readers, both lay and learned, will ſtruggle hard to know what he found—A man muſt be new in practice to think that the bulk of the faculty will flap daſh come into his peremptory concluſion, that becauſe a few days before he ſaw her, ſhe expectorated purulent matter, ſhe muſt therefore continue without alteration in that particular, till the 24th. But as he has called on the gentlemen of the faculty in this or any other place for a juſtification of his cenſure—I heartily requeſt every gentleman on the continent who may read and compare the relations, juſt as they ſtand, to publiſh their ſentiments of juſtification or condemnation, as their honor and conſcience may direct them.
